The Pelican Dump – the world’s first and only social activist blog and record label combination – releases R. Garcia’s *Music for One Generator, a four track collection of random, elliptical lullabies.

Hailing from Florida’s dance music scene, Randy Garcia made a name for himself as the founder of boutique label Nophi Records, and through his varied and eclectic releases. He recently made the move towards indie pop, forming The Nerd Parade whose debut album, A Delicate Bashing, was met with lascivious praise. Riding on this acclaim, Garcia further cements his solo career with the release of 6 new albums in six months, Music For One Generator being the first. Fittingly, The Pelican Dump – a ‘home-spun digital label showcasing avant/experimental and just plane weird music’ – announces Music for One Generator as their opening statement.

Garcia releases this album as a lullaby record meant to create simultaneously soothing and jarring atmospheres. When creating the record, in order to be removed from the process – to be an active listener – he automated a series of random events: songs arranged by mathematics, probability. The result is repeating chaos. But emerging from this array of calculated randomness, there are themes to be heard, if one listens deeply.

The record begins with the chilling ambience of Bucky’s Book, strident and unpredictable, a modern Renaissance parade of sound. The Lepidopterist seems to takes us to another planet where large rocks grow mouths, and with slow deliberation, tell each other their secrets through the wind. Constructs in Molten Gold feels like a million mermaids simultaneously exhaling, while A Place for Everything concludes the album with the quiet, eerie sounds of rain drops communicating.

Music for One Generator is available exclusively for FREE download from the Pelican Dump.
